

Dr Raz is a professor of Internal Medicine at Hadassah University Medical Center and the Head of the Diabetes Unit at Hadassah University Hospital where he is involved in basic and clinical research and is currently leading several large international studies. Prof. Raz is also the head of the Israel National Council of Diabetes which is responsible for formulating national policies. In addition, Prof. Raz is President of D-Cure, a non-profit organization that promotes and funds scientific research in Israel for finding a cure and better treatments for diabetes. He is the international PI of large outcome diabetes studies involving the heart and kidney, has over 230 publications to his credit in professional peer-reviewed journals and serves on international advisory and editorial boards. Prof. Raz holds an MD from Hadassah Medical School at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.